

How to Edit Application Privacy Settings in Facebook

Denise Smith, PMP, CSM, ITIL

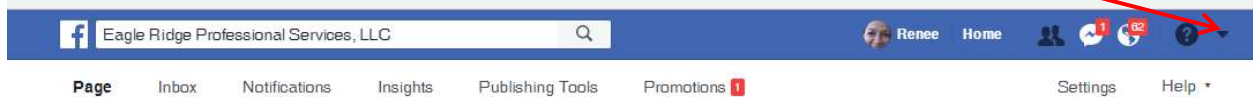

With all the attention being placed on data breaches these days it is a good idea to take a look at which applications in Facebook have access to your personal information, what they are doing with that information and whether or not they can post to your timeline.

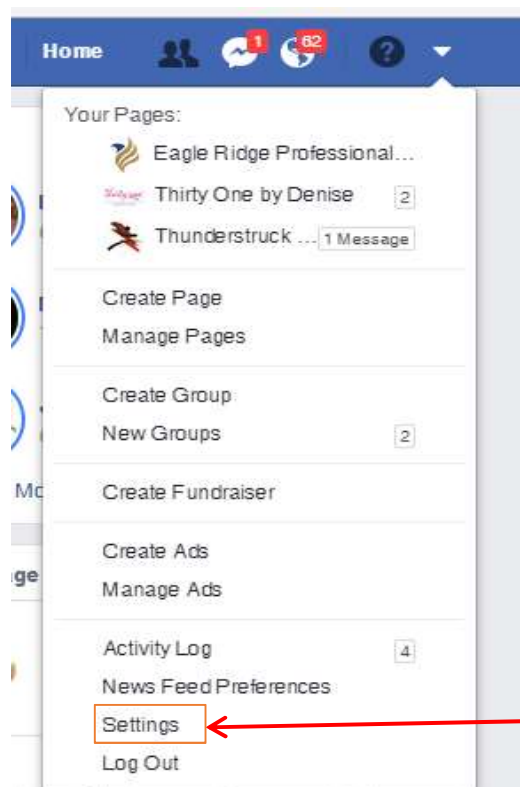

These simple steps will allow you to see those applications as well as provide you the information on how to edit the privacy settings for each application. Please note that Facebook does not have an “all” button so you will have to go into each application to change the privacy settings one application at a time.

Edit Privacy Settings for Applications within Facebook

Click the Small Arrow next to the question mark at the top right of the New feed

Then Select Settings

Then Select Apps and Websites on left side of screen

This will bring up a page showing you a portion of the applications that have access to your personal information. You will see at the top of the page the total number of applications that can see your personal information. In order to see all of the applications click on the show all button at the bottom of the page only then will you be presented with a list of all the applications.
